THE SILVERMEN IN DISTRESS.
With wheat at 65 cents a bushel, which is an advance of 20 cents since last August, and wages rising all over the country, the free silver people, who are peculiarly dependent upon the misfortunes of others for their own prosperity, are in a great deal of trouble. Their whole argument is based upon the theory that the scarcity and consequent appreciation of gold have had a most depressing effect upon both wages and prices, and hence that the only way to counteract that effect is to adopt the free silver coinage policy. Passing over the tremendous assumption that low prices are things to be deplored, and admitting that cheapness is synonymous with necessities, it is to be remarked that though we are still on the gold basis, and though gold is still "scarce" and "dear," prices and wages are tending upward. Of course this is a sad blow to the silverites. There should have been no advance in anything but gold until the "crime of 1873" had been wiped out and silver restored to its "rights and privileges."

It thus becomes evident that we are not dependent upon the silver statistics for our prosperity. In times of trouble and disaster people can sometimes be tempted into trying foolish expedients, especially when those expedients are vigorously advocated as precisely adapted to the industrial needs of the country. In such a state of things the quacks and their opportunity, and they make the most of it. But they have little or no influence when business is good and improving every day. When that is the condition of affairs people are content to let things alone, and they are not likely to follow the lead of men who have manifestly attributed the trouble to wrong causes. It is not enough, however, for our silver friends that they are at present playing the role of discredited prophets, and that the trend of industrial forces is all against them. Not content with real trouble, they are busy at work making trouble for themselves, and that over a subject which is not of the slightest importance. In a word, they are already quarreling about presidential candidates, and doing it as earnestly as if they really expected to elect a President next year.

The story of the row is interesting. Gen. A. J. Warner, one of the most rampant and perpetual silver men in the world, and ex-congressman Sibley, who was supposed to have a "clinch" on the silver nomination for the presidency, have reached California in their wanderings. It was thought that their visit would have a stimulating effect upon the brethren of the Pacific coast, and so it has, though not in the way intended. The Californians are evidently of the opinion that Sibley is taking too much for granted, and they said so at a meeting of the executive committee of their State Bimetallist League, which was held Saturday. Not only that, but they have seceded from the Warner party, because they do not relish "the attempt of General Warner and several Congressmen, enthusiastic for the re-nomination of silver, to make Sibley the presidential candidate of the white metal party in the next campaign." They resent the dictation of Warner and the others, and denounce them for "seeking a division of the bimetallic party by a wrongful use of party machinery to force indorsement of the said candidate," etc.

But this is not their only grievance. These Californians are not only objecting to Sibley, but they question the orthodoxy of the proposed candidate and his backers. Their advocacy of silver is denounced as "dishonest," and they are openly charged with not being sufficiently hostile to the national banks. So Warner and Sibley are both condemned and the silver men of other States are appealed to follow the example of California and "to protest against the caucus method." Henceforth California will have nothing to do with Warner and his crowd. The bimetallic league of that State will move independently of Warner and the national party, and proposes to hold a national convention of its own at St. Louis, next March. It is evident that General Warner must be pronounced guilty of causing a "division of the bimetallic party," for he seems to be responsible for this California schism. For ourselves we can not see that it makes a particle of difference who is nominated as the silver candidate for President. The nominee, whoever he is, will of course be disastrously beaten. Whether it is Sibley or another man the result will be the same, so it looks as though the silver people were fighting over shadows.

But it is possible that there is more than this back of the dissatisfaction of the Californians. It is said that they are not only in favor of the "rehabilitation of silver," but that they are also fervent believers in other articles of the Populist creed. They do not seem to think it is enough to secure free coinage at the 16 to 1 ratio; but they want an issue of greenbacks and a declaration against national banks and the further issuance of Government bonds. That is they are greenbackers. The schism is the result of a difference of opinion both as to methods and principles, and thus it becomes a very serious affair. The two old parties have had plenty of trouble over this silver question, and now it appears that the elect themselves are not exempt from the infirmities which are the portion of ordinary humanity. We are likely to see as many kinds of silver men as we now see of Republicans and Democrats.

THE GOVERNOR AND ROBY.
Governor Matthews will have the support of all good citizens in any efforts he may make to rid the State of the Roby disgrace. The intent of the law is plain. If the language is so loose as to give the Roby "combustion" a chance by the subterfuge of many associations, to continue ramping indefinitely, there should still be ample power in the authorities to abate the nuisance. These tracks like Roby exist for the sake of the betting; the races are really only a means to an end. Few people visit such tracks to find entertainment in the races themselves. They go to bet on the races there run and to gamble on the races run on other tracks throughout the country. If, therefore, the betting is stopped, the racing will have to stop. Simply by enforcing rigidly the laws against pool-selling and gambling at Roby, the continuous racing industry which exists there for the benefit of the "shady elements" of a great city in a neighboring State can be suppressed.

CONSERVATIVE AND PROGRESSIVE.

The conflict at DePaul, if we understand aright, was between progress and reaction; the new and the old; the present and the past. The old seems to have triumphed for the nonce. Dr. John, who stands for advanced ideas in education, has resigned. The contest at Butler is of much the same sort. There have been rumors of similar contentions at other of the State's denominational colleges.

Perhaps it is inevitable that the two sets of ideas should everywhere be in opposition, and that now and then the opposition should break out into open conflict. Men in all relations fall into two grand divisions, the conservatives and the progressives; men who hold to the old, because it is old and because they understand it, and men who are eager to push forward into new paths, to try new experiments, refusing to believe "that all virtue was the Past's." Both classes are useful, provided neither loses all sympathy with and understanding of the other. The presumption may be in favor of "that which hath been," but the fathers did not know it all. Man is still man and master of his fate. The fault of the conservative is inertia and self-satisfaction; his virtue is in holding fast that which is good. The fault of the progressive is rashness and irreverence of the old; his virtue is a divine discontent with things as they are. One says, let well enough alone; the other says, not as though I had already attained, I press forward. The former is useful in advice, in caution; the latter standards, improves, pushes forward the standard. The conservative is lost in admiration of what the race has already accomplished, and feels, with a sense of oppression, the responsibility of retaining the good already wrought. The progressive regards what is already gained only as a vantage ground for further conquest. Toward the future he looks as the land of promise.

It is unfortunate in our opinion when an institution of higher learning is not sympathetic with new ideas and new methods. Content with things as they are tends to produce stagnation. The new idea may not be better than the old. But then it may be. Prove all things; hold fast that which is good. So the world goes forward; so new truth comes. They whose faces are turned to the sun sank last night. What the teachers taught and how they taught is not taught and how they taught is not taught. We should teach whether it be about faith, or science, or philosophy. "Worshippers of light ancestral make the present light a crime." Truth has nothing to fear; it is mighty and will prevail. The conservatives may win now; but their victories are always of short duration. The world must get forward; it does get forward; and so, sooner or later, the liberal, progressive spirit wins its way and dominates men and institutions.

"December's as pleasant as May," and vice versa.

The California silverites evidently object to the Warner-Sibley brand of ideas. General Warner is to be pitied. No man ever stood more firmly by any cause than he has stood by the cause of free silver. Whatever may be true of others, he at least has never wavered. He has insisted that the Government could make sixteen ounces of silver worth one ounce of gold, irrespective of the real values of the metals, by simply passing a law declaring their equality. And yet he now finds himself denounced by the men who should be proud to follow him. His methods are objected to, and even the sincerity of his faith is called in question. This is indeed a hard fate. But it is frequently the fate of reformers. His chief regret will be of course by the bimetallic party to divide. He will not mourn for himself, but for the cause to which he has given so many years of his best endeavor. With Blackburn fighting the Democratic party, with Teller threatening to "disrupt" the Republican party by leaving it, and with the California "kickers" seceding from the silver party, it is painfully apparent that American politics is much demoralized. So far the Prohibition party seems to be holding together—and that is something to be thankful for.

It begins to appear that after all the biggest part of the New York Legislature belongs to Tom Platt.

After investigating the charges of bribery against it, the New York Senate finds itself all right.

There is one further suggestion which would respectfully submit to the consideration of General Wallace in his scheme for "improving" the monument "regardless of expense." And that is that the four great avenues, Massachusetts, Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana, should be paved with a beautiful, common, like St. Peter's at Rome. (2) That the great avenues be cut through to the circle. Where streets and avenues reach the circle the colonnade could appropriately be embellished to assume the character of triumphal arches. (3) The fountain should be enlarged and improved, so as to rival the fountain of Trevi at Rome, and the White river should be connected with them to give ample flow. (4) The statues of Gen. William Henry Harrison, Governor Morton, George Rogers Clark and Governor Whitcomb should give place to some captains and generals who fell in battle. (5) The heroic figure of the idealized Indiana, standing firm-footed on the globe, with the sword of justice in one hand, and the torch of enlightenment in the other, should give place to the stock infantryman, such as every other monument in the country has, so as to avoid the offense of originality. Possibly other changes will suggest themselves; improvements in the astragali, in the inscriptions, in the shaft, in the form of the statue, in the structure of the steps. But these can

MONEY AND PRICES.

Volume of Metallic Money Has Little Effect in Fixing Prices.

Matthew Marshall in New York Sun.

The free silver men, the bimetalists, and the inflationists generally have been advocating all along that the depression which has prevailed until lately in the prices of agricultural commodities and of property of various kinds was caused by a scarcity of money, and that nothing but an increase of the supply of it could counteract the evil. Yet here, in the space of three months, we have had not only an increase of the supply of paper money

but an increase in the nominal value of stock exchange securities and of cotton, wheat and other commodities, and of many various other articles of commerce. The total of these clearings, in this city alone, averages

$100,000,000 daily, and in the other cities of the country nearly as much more. This enormous volume of transactions, amounting to $600,000,000 a year, is accomplished by the use of a comparatively small amount of money, and it is not to be supposed that it can be said to require none at all. How much more business is done by book credit than by actual cash is well known and is not to be supposed that it is less affected by the volume of money in circulation than the actual cash business. The volume of money available for purchases, and thus to raise prices, is not to be supposed

RICHMOND'S GREAT LIBRARY

DESCRIPTION OF THE MORRISON-REEVES BUILDING.

How the Structure Was Begun By Robert Morrison, and Added To By His Descendants—The Great Memorial Window.

Correspondence of The Indianapolis News, Richmond, Ind., May 14.—One of the features of Richmond is the Morrison-Reeves Library, frequent mention of which was made during the progress of the celebrated Morrison will case. Among the many things claimed was that large sums of money had been secured from James L. Morrison to rebuild, or rather make an addition to, this library, which is to Richmond as the City Library is to Indianapolis. Many people outside this city imagine that the library was given by James L. Morrison, whose fortune was in controversy in the great legal battle recently fought. This is not true. The library was given to the city by Robert Morrison, the father of James, one of the early settlers, who built up the fortune over which his grandchildren and great-grandchildren disagreed.

When Robert Morrison had reached comparative affluence from abject poverty, he looked about him for a monument to his memory. He was a kindly soul, was the old Hickite Quaker, who believed in doing good and teaching the coming generations to follow in the footsteps of their fathers.

Establishment of the Library. He decided to establish a public library—a place where the youth of the city might go to receive information and the aged pass the time in the company of good books. The matter was talked about for a long time. Mr. Morrison, however, kept his plans to himself, and when he was ready the work began. The library was opened in 1834, with about 6,000 books. The greater portion of the money it cost came from the purse of Robert Morrison.

The first building was not the building of today, but it was a noble structure in its time and there is more than one father and mother in this city whose hair is beginning to show the silver lines who used to meet and chat at the Morrison Library, even as their sons and daughters are now meeting and chatting at the Morrison-Reeves Library of today.

When the library was opened, it was a small affair, but it was a noble structure in its time and there is more than one father and mother in this city whose hair is beginning to show the silver lines who used to meet and chat at the Morrison Library, even as their sons and daughters are now meeting and chatting at the Morrison-Reeves Library of today.

in the original Morrison library many years ago. There is nothing of the kind in this State, and Richmond is as proud of the memorial window as is a mother of her first-born. It is a dream in glass—a history written with the glazier's diamond and illustrated with the designer's skill. It was designed by Frederick Wilson and Joseph Laubach. The glass was selected and placed in position by a young woman in the employ of Tiffany, of New York, and the work was done under the personal supervision of Louis C. Tiffany, and passed the inspection of the various art institutions of the East before it was brought to the West.

The window is composed of four lights made up of vari-colored panes. The central panel is an upright and is the largest of the four. In it is portrayed the historic representation of John Gutenberg demonstrating to John Faust and others of his companions his ideas of printing with movable type.

Immediately above, and to the left and right above the picture panel are three small horizontal panels, whose heraldic designs are connected with one another by a series of interlacing ribbons and flowers bearing those inscriptions that directly relate to books in their relation to the souls, minds and hearts of men.

In the first small horizontal panel are represented the coats of arms of the four great printers who were the originators of the art in their respective countries: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the second panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the third small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the fourth small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the fifth small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the sixth small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the seventh small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the eighth small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the ninth small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. These coats of arms are woven together with flowers and ribbons, which bear this motto: Labor et Constantia.

In the tenth small horizontal panel are represented the arms of Dante, Goethe, Spinoza, de Varga and Mullers. Here appears also the respective coats of arms of the four great printers of the world: William Caxton, the Englishman; of Aldus Manutius, the Italian; of Simon Stevanus, the Frenchman; and of the Flemish printer. A PIS-ALLER.

"They're admirably suited to one another," said I.

"Oh, admirably!" said Cousin Flo.

There was a pause. Flo frowned at the table. I don't think that we either of us looked very pleased. Yet it was a most fortunate arrangement.

The only thing that surprised me about it," I observed, "is that Philippa should have done it. I'm very glad, you know, but I'm surprised."

"I'm not so surprised about her!" said Flo.

I looked up, much annoyed.

"You might be much annoyed," said I, severely.

"I'm not blaming her, Dick. When he likes, Captain Worsley can be very good."

"Oh, I suppose he humbugged her about culture and all that. If I'd liked to go on like that—"

"Oh, nothing. Don't worry a fellow!"

"I'm sure that Captain Worsley did nothing that a gentleman wouldn't."

I was so much annoyed at this remark, that I said to Flo:

"He got over his disappointment about you pretty soon, though."

Flo laughed with extraordinary nonchalance as she answered:

"Philippa doesn't seem to have been disappointed at all about you."

"My dear Florence," said I, "I have no desire to discuss Miss March with you."

"Well, then, why did you begin about her?"

"Come, come, let's say no more about them. We're well quit of them. I don't bear them much, do you?"

"Not the least, Dick. In fact, I quite understand what Philippa must have felt about you. She likes serious people—people who have high aims, you know."

"Yes, but you don't hit," observed Flo.

"At any rate," I cried, "I don't flit about with very high aims."

"What do you mean, Dick?"

At this point—and very fortunate was the occurrence—Aunt Maud came in. She had been married to the Colonel for three years, and is recovering her power of patronizing persons who are engaged in keeping up appearances.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

WOMAN'S CRITICAL PERIOD

Contemplated with Less Fear than of Old.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

There is no period in woman's earthly career which she approaches with so much anxiety as the "change of life."

Yet during the past twenty years women have learned much from a woman.

It is safe to say that women who prepare themselves for the eventful period pass through it much easier than in the past.

There is but one course to pursue.

A STORY FROM JAMAICA.

ONE MAN'S EXPERIENCE WITH DYSPEPSIA.

Food Disturbed His Heart Was In A Precarious Condition.

(From Brooklyn, N. Y. Times.)

There is no secret now as to what was the matter with George L. Bergen of Jamaica, L. I. His friends thought he had gone into a decline, and possibly, had heart disease. And no doubt he did; but it all came from dyspepsia, a disease that has been cured, his heart disease has disappeared also. He told a reporter of the Times what cured him the other day, and his conversation is reprinted here.

The trouble was with my digestive system, and with my heart. As a consequence, for nearly six years I was unable to enjoy a meal. To partake of food, bread, cake, pie, or any kind of pastry was out of the question. A small portion of food of this character would give me untold agony. So I had to go without. My trouble steadily increased, despite all my efforts to check it. I took all sorts of medicines prescribed by physicians, with no perceptible abatement of the disorder. Finally my heart became involved, and occasionally I would be disturbed with tumultuous beating and palpitation. Worse than all, feelings of oppression and suffocation would ensue, and sometimes the heart action would be suspended. I confess I was very much alarmed when these symptoms manifested themselves, and when I lay down to sleep I would be seized by a cold sweat and a state of utter despair.

One evening, last fall, I noticed in the Brooklyn Times an account of a remarkable cure effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I was pale and that fact helped to awaken my interest in the advertisement, which I read through carefully. A day or two later a similar narrative appeared with reference to the pills, the symptoms of the person cured being similar to my own. That satisfied the question for me. The next morning I procured a box, and before I had taken half of them I experienced decided relief. I continued the pills, and my improvement was rapid, until now I can eat with impunity what my appetite suggests, without regard to time or amount, in reason of course, the functional disturbances of the heart have disappeared. I have already had heart trouble, but I have been greatly relieved by the use of the Pink Pills. I consider myself cured of the stomach trouble. Anyone having the symptoms I have described may take the pills with the utmost confidence of their bringing relief. Mr. Bergen is an active member of the Jamaica Athletic and Arcadian, an exempt fireman and has been for many years connected with the hardware establishment of James T. Lewis, one of the largest mercantile concerns on Long Island.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore exhausted nerves. They are made by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.
